

When we look outside, brown, green, and white are usually pretty easy to spot. But, if we look closer, we can find a whole rainbow of colors.

1. Print out a copy of this color palette or save it to your portable device.
2. Go outside and see if you can find a natural item that matches each color. Look carefully! A matching item might be something small or be a small part of something bigger.
3. Try to match each color as closely as you can. If you want, write or draw what you find.
4. Create a museum or gallery of the different colored things you find.

What colors were the hardest to find? Which were the easiest?

What color did you find in nature that you didn't expect?

What other colors can you find outside?

